Iowa and Ohio will vote by a big majority to keep the rascals out.

President Arthur can manage with economy, to keep the wolf from the door. He pays taxes on $255,000 worth of property in New York alone.

The United States is to have another English beauty, in the person of Mrs. Cornwallis West. This may be a genuine case of real beauty, as the Prince of Wales did not make the discovery.

When the democrats were in power, the government found it difficult to borrow money at 12 per cent. It can now find plenty takers of its bonds at 3 per cent, and yet the democrats cry, "turn the rascals out."

The Hartly Clifford case was argued before the supreme court on Saturday, but the opinion will not be given until about two weeks. Of course it would be idle to guess what the court will do—grant a new trial or decide that Clifford should remain in state prison.

The Chicago Journal says that as Great Britain will require 100,000,000 bushels of foreign wheat before the next harvest, and the crop of Europe as a whole is less than it was a year ago the demand for American wheat ought to be brisk, and our entire surplus will doubtless be marketed at prices satisfactory to producers and promotive of trade generally.

When Governor Sherman, of Iowa, was on the stump during the present canvass he annoyed his democratic hearers by putting this question: "Now, my friends, can you tell me when, in all the history of the democratic party, that party has ever advocated any moral principle?" To be sure he never got an answer from any democrat during the campaign.

The great races at the Chicago driving park began to-day, having been postponed on Saturday on account of the storm. These races will be the most important ever known in Chicago. The programme will close on Saturday when the great trot between Jay-Eye-See and St. Julien for a purse of $5,000 will take place. The contest between these noted trotters will be watched with the deepest interest in all parts of the country.

The young man—Homer Lee, of New York—who has the contract for printing the postal notes, has more than a bonanza. His contract runs for four years, and he is able by a press of his own invention, to work off 1,000 sheets an hour from the plates, while the plate presses in the government office at Washington can only work 600 a day. The government has been badly sold in giving the contract to Lee for four years, and congress is ordered to investigate the matter, and if possible to rescind the contract.

THE SYSTEM OF ITINERANCY.

During the past few years there has been a sort of an unrest among many members of the Methodist Episcopal church in regard to the system of itinerancy. In many cases it proved very annoying to the church, because no matter how popular a minister might have been, his pastorate was limited to three years. There were so many cases in which a church desired to retain its pastor more than three years, especially in the large cities, that the question became widely discussed among the people, and in the annual conferences. It entered into the proceedings of the Wisconsin conference which has just closed its session in Milwaukee, and the following preamble and resolution were adopted:

WHEREAS, The past history of the church proves exclusively that our system of itinerancy has worked well in the past, and we think it would be unwise at this time to change the same, as recommended by the presiding elders' convention at Minneapolis, Therefore,

Resolved, That our delegates to the next general conference be instructed to use their voice and vote against the proposed change of the rule on the itinerancy.

This was adopted by a large majority, and a like action was taken by the conference in Minnesota, and also by the Rock River conference at Chicago. So far, the annual conferences have taken decided action against any change in the itinerant system, and of course this will prohibit any change being made by the general conference which meets in Philadelphia next May.

The itinerant system has been a powerful agency in building up the Methodist church in new states and in the territories. It has been a blessing to hundreds of impoverished churches, and a boon to thousands of preachers who were not able to command attention in the larger towns and cities. It gave them a living and a pulpit when without itinerancy they could get neither. However destitute of ability and learning such ministers may have been, they have done a noble work in extending church interests, and the present conferences are loath to make a change that would throw that class of ministers on the mercy of an uncharitable world. The itinerant plan has its faults and in some cases works harm, but in many cases it has its strong points, and all things considered should be retained.

OHIO AND IOWA.

The elections to-morrow in Ohio and Iowa will be watched with deep interest by all the states. There does not seem to be any doubt as to the result in either state, the only question the public feeling anxious about being the size of the majorities. Iowa is expected to give 30,000 majority for the state ticket, and the republicans are positive that 65 of the 100 republican candidates for the legislature will be elected. Mr. Robert Burdette, of Burlington, places the majority for the state ticket at 32,000, and he considers this a very reasonable estimate.

Everything points to the utter defeat of Judge Hoadly, in Ohio. The democrats are selling him out for the legislature. There is a bitter fight against him by the factions opposed to his nomination, and in Cincinnati and other places, the democrats are letting the judge go for what he will fetch, and will try to secure the legislature. Taking all the situations into account—the fighting among the democrats and the scheme to sacrifice Hoadly—that a democratic legislature may be elected—there does not seem to be any sort of doubt that he will go down to defeat. It is an abominable plan on which to manage a campaign, but it is democratic, and Judge Hoadly must be content with the practice of his party.

It is not certain that the democrats will carry the legislature, but there is a much better chance for them to do this than to elect Hoadly. He does not cut a very important figure in the campaign. The great prize is the legislature, which will elect a United States senator next winter. The democrats have several candidates for this office, and they are burying the hatchet in each other's head in trying to secure it. With these dissensions in the party in Ohio, they will lose the governorship, and possibly the legislature.

A RUMORED ASSASSINATION.

At present there does not seem to be any foundation for the rumor that Charles Seymour, consul of the United States at Canton, China, was assassinated. A telegram from Milwaukee to the Madison Democrat Sunday Morning, said that rumors had reached that city that he had been murdered by the infuriated population at Canton, and was the result of the feeling of the Chinese against all foreign residents of Canton because of the result of the trial of the Tidewater Logan. Seymour's wife and daughter sailed for home several weeks ago, but have not yet reached La Crosse. Mr. Seymour was formerly postmaster at La Crosse, and for many years was editor of the La Crosse Republican.

A cable special received at New York says: "The news from China to-night is of the gravest character, as the Marquis Tseng stated to-day in Paris he feared it would be. Word has just been received that Charles Seymour, of Wisconsin, the United States consul at Canton, had been assassinated by a mob. The population of Canton has been in a ferment all day, and the popular turbulence has been directed almost exclusively against foreigners without discrimination."

The press report says that up to seven o'clock Sunday morning the state department had received no advice that an outbreak had occurred in Canton or that United States Consul Seymour had been killed. The state department telegraphed China early this morning upon learning the published rumor of Consul Seymour's death, but no reply to the inquiry had been received.

AN OVERFLOWING TREASURY.

When the condition of the United States treasury was examined on Saturday, it was found to contain:

Gold coin and bullion, $30,538,312
Silver dollar and bullion, 10,723,691
Fractional silver coin, 25,229,732
United States notes, 55,129,567
Total, $121,621,292

This is more money than was ever before found in the government vaults. Over four hundred millions is too much money to have on hand at any time, because the government has no use for it. The resources of the United States are enormous. They are increasing every year. Millions are being piled up month after month, until the surplus of money becomes a troublesome matter. It leads to recklessness and extravagance, as was shown in the passage of the river and harbor bill a year and a half ago. One great point many members of congress made in favor of the bill was that the treasury was too full of money and that it might as well be thrown away on rivers and harbors as on anything else. This idea prevailed with a majority of the members of congress, and the bill passed. Such a treasury begets extravagance, and now the question is what must be done with the surplus instead of spending it lavishly?

In the first place, the coinage of the silver dollar should be cut off, or the amount coined per month greatly reduced. If the treasury goes on at its present rate of coining and piling up the dollars, they will certainly do a great deal toward overturning our standard of values. The secretary of the treasury is very much handicapped by the burdensome surplus on hand. There are no bonds above the 3 per cent, that are redeemable at present, and to buy up the 4's at $120 or the 4 1/2's at $114 would be counted a foolish piece of financing. The 3's are redeemable at pleasure, but most of these are held by banks to secure their circulation, and should the secretary go on redeeming them with the surplus in the treasury, "he will gradually wipe out the whole national bank circulation, since it would be impossible for the banks to replace their three per cents. with four and four and a half per cents."

Let us see if he will continue to do this, or if congress will provide a wiser way of paying the debt, and of checking this enormous surplus, which is flowing into the treasury.

THE DEADLY RAIL.

Collision on Saturday of Two Freight Trains on the Lake Shore at Pittsford, Mich.

The Wreck Set on Fire and Three Persons Roasted to Death—Several Injured.

A Street-Car Shattered by a Freight Train at Allegheny City, Pa.—Twenty-five People Maimed.

Serious Accident to a Chicago Suburban Train—Two Men Scalded Alive Near Cresco, Pa.

Dangers of Travel.

MADRID, Oct. 8.—A terrible collision occurred on the Lake Shore Road at Pittsford, twenty-four miles west of this city, at six o'clock Saturday morning. Local freight train No. 60 arrived at Pittsford several hours late with a number of passengers in the caboose at the rear end of the train. While No. 60 was standing at Pittsford No. 50, a through freight, came around a bend and down a steep curve west of the station, crashing into the rear end of the first train with terrible violence and completely wrecking the caboose and eight freight cars of each train, and the engine of No. 50.

The engineer, Chris Neundhart, of Toledo, jumped, but was severely injured. The people in the caboose were all either killed or wounded. The wrecked cars immediately took fire and were consumed. The charred remains of Mrs. J. Rogers, of Toledo, and those of Mrs. J. Rogers, of Toledo, and those of Mrs. J. Rogers, of Toledo, were found. Mrs. Mark Gay, of Hudson, was horribly mutilated, her limbs being completely crushed, and she died before noon, a ravaging maul.

The accident was undoubtedly due to the negligence of the people on the first train to warn those on the second, on whose train they were running. Conductor Agcume, of Elkhart, had charge of train No. 60 and Conductor Harry Andrews, of Toledo, was running No. 50.

A DUNNY DITCHED.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 8.—The out-bound dummy train on the Chicago & Western Railroad, jumping the track Robinson avenue, Astoria, Sunday afternoon. The car, after becoming derailed, fell over on one side and was precipitated into a ditch adjoining the track. Some one hundred passengers occupied the car. They were badly shaken up by the accident, but with few exceptions managed to escape without serious injuries. Charles Cook, of 637 Carroll avenue, received numerous cuts and bruises besides sustaining internal injuries, which were pronounced of a fatal character. Mrs. Rust, of 54 Sheldon court, was another sufferer by the mishap, her injuries consisting of a cut on the head, which was of a severe but not fatal nature. Seven other passengers were more or less bruised, while the remainder escaped without a scratch. The injured passengers were conveyed to an adjoining house, where medical assistance was summoned, and everything done to relieve the suffering. The accident was the result of attempting to speed the dummy around the curve, the flange of the wheel striking a joint in the iron track and derailing the car.

ANOTHER STREET-CAR HORROR.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Oct. 8.—Saturday evening the brakes on a street-car got out of order as the car reached the top of a steep grade on Sandusky street, Allegheny City. The car ran through the gates at the crossing of the Fort Wayne Railroad and collided with a passing freight train. The car was wrecked, and all the persons in it, twenty-five in number, were more or less injured. Four of them, Charles Menzies, Mrs. Mary Martin, Mary Hall (colored), and Mary Dunham, were severely hurt, and the two last named are likely to die. No blame is attached to anybody for the accident.

TWO MEN SCALDED ALIVE.

SCRANTON, Pa., Oct. 8.—A terrible collision occurred on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railroad, near Cresco. Three coal trains were coming down the mountain, following each other closely. The last of the rear train failed to hold and the train came dashing down into the second one, piling up the coal cars and throwing the engine over on to the south-bound train, completely wrecking it. The engineer and fireman of the rear train stuck to their engine and were fatally injured by the escaping steam. The fireman, Archibald Ford, the oldest man in the mine, was literally roasted alive. The flesh came off with his clothes when they were removed. The engineer, John Dunn, of this city, can not live. He has a wife and family living here.

Craft Fearing a Mob's Vengeance.

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 8.—Ellis Craft refuses now to see any newspaper reporters. He maintains his cheerfulness, but is disappointed on account of Governor Knott's refusal to send troops to his execution. He fears that unless protected a mob will hang him for the purpose of misrepresenting his dying words.

A Large Twine Factory Burned.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Oct. 8.—The Kentucky River Mills manufactory of hemp twine, half a mile below the city, was burned completely Saturday afternoon. The loss on machinery is $95,000, building, $10,000; stock, $150,000; furniture, $30,000. One hundred and fifty operatives are thrown out. The workmen are mostly from Vermont, Massachusetts and New Hampshire. The machinery was very fine and was imported from England and Scotland. A negro was seen to jump from a window and run across the line just before the fire. It is thought he started the fire.

Sergeant Mason's Case.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—Mr. James M. Lyddy, of New York, the attorney of Sergeant Mason, recently applied to the War Department for a copy of Judge-Advocate General Swain's report of the findings of the court-martial in that case. Secretary Lincoln refused positively to furnish a copy, giving as a reason that he regarded General Swain's report as a confidential communication. It is said that the objection to giving the matter to the public is due to the fact that General Swain made a report favorable to Mason's release.
